BASKETBALL CLINICS WITH COACH SLAPPY

At 22 years of age, Wayne Slappy became the youngest head basketball coach in the history of his alma mater, Weequahic High School in Newark, NJ, in 1974. “Coach Slappy” (as his protégés refer to him) coached, counseled and/or offered skills training to basketball players for more than 38 years. Wayne moved to Los Angeles in 1994 and has successfully helped hundreds of high school athletes to acquire collegiate scholarships. He has been associated with the Five-Star Basketball Camp network of coaches ever since he coached Michael Jordan at their Robert Morris site the summer before entering his senior year at Laney High. He has also provided skills training and advice to a host of male and female professional athletes at some point in their careers who have either played or are currently on numerous NBA, WNBA and FIBA rosters.

Coach Slappy is a volunteer at the Teen Center. His clinics are very popular with the participants. He not only shows them basketball skills but he also serves as a life coach for the youth.
